Aztec Art 101

The Aztecs made art mostly because they thought that it would please the gods and bring good fortune.

Aztec art used metaphors.

Inspired by birds such as macaws and quetzal, craftsmen used feathers to make headdresses, pictures and decorated shields. Skilled workers wove brightly coloured feathers together to create beautiful cloaks and headdresses. Only the king and the nobles could wear them.

Stone carvings decorated the walls of the temples. The Aztecs carved small details and patterns as well as huge statues of the gods. Female statues were shown kneeling with their hands on knees. Male statues were sat cross-legged.

The Aztecs took great pride in their ability to create beautiful pottery. Other nations were keen to trade for Aztec pots. The finest pottery was kept for ritual use and belonged to the wealthy. Geometric patterns were a feature on bowls.
